ROCK THE NET

★ musicians for network neutrality

Network neutrality -- or Net Neutrality -- is the principle that preserves a free and open Internet. Net neutrality ensures that all users can access the content, or run the applications and devices, of their choice.

Rock the Net is a nationwide campaign organized by the Future of Music Coalition to recruit thousands of artists to support the fight for net neutrality. The campaign kicked off with the support of dozens of high-profile musicians including R.E.M., Pearl Jam, Boots Riley of The Coup, Ted Leo, Death Cab for Cutie, OK Go, the Kronos Quartet, Sarah McLachlan, Barenaked Ladies, Caexico, The Donnas, Kathleen Hanna and many others. As musicians and entrepreneurs, we understand the importance of treating all websites equally -- from the busiest online music store to the smallest blog.

At the Rock the Net website, bands can sign on to the campaign, then add your upcoming shows to the Rock the Net database, which will display on our interactive map cataloging events around the country. Music fans can also invite other bands to join, sign a petition and send a letter to Congress.

Our goal is to demonstrate the music community's nationwide support for the principle of net neutrality. Join us in this fight for internet freedom and equality.
